Hugo and Patrick Speak

It was an afternoon to remember. I was invited by an old friend Joseph Trimble to visit him in Innsbruck. Innsbruck is the capital of Austria's western state of Tyrol. The city is in the Alps. It was cold and I am not a fan - not with my arthritis and steel in my thigh. Nonetheless, Innsbruck is beautiful and its mixture of Imperial and modern architecture blends beautifully.

Whilst I am no skier and no AI expert, I am fascinated by technology and its increasing role in our lives. So, when I received Joseph's invitation for a unique afternoon with Mark Fedorov, the famous computer scientist, I accepted. Fedorov, born in Russia, American father, Russian mother, lived in China for a long time and now teaching privately and undertaking research in the US (Nevada), is a well-known AI pioneer in many fields. I arrived from Cairo to Innsbruck, checked in the Penz Hotel and enjoyed a shower, watching the Tyrolean mountains from my window and dressed as warmly as I could. I proceeded to the lobby to meet my car and driver that would take me to Joseph's office.

It was a pleasant surprise that a blond woman in an attractive navy pinstripe suit and long boots with a coat on her shoulders approached me with a big smile and extended her hand to welcome me, introducing herself as Isabella and saying that she was here to take me to Joseph.

We walked to the door and a car with a chauffeur, Kurt, was waiting and in a short 15-minute drive we were at Joseph's office. Joseph was warm and welcoming in casual clothes, a yellow pullover, a pair of black jeans and black boots. Peering from behind round eyeglasses, Joseph took me to a large room where chairs were set in a concave fashion. There must have been 12 or 14 chairs facing two tables with computers and two chairs facing each other. There was no one in the room except 3 technicians clearly finalizing setting up and testing the equipment. One of them was speaking via a wireless to another person or persons not in the room, in German. I could not make what was being said. Joseph said we were early and that the technicians were Mark's staff putting the final touches on this pioneering experiment.

Shortly, a gentleman that looked like a copy of Tsar Nicholas II walked in with imperial steps. Sergey Andropov was out of central casting, a lookalike to Nikolai Alexandrovich Romanov, the last Emperor of Russia who ruled Russia from November 1894 to March 1917.

Sergey smiled as Joseph introduced him noticing my surprise. The hair, the moustache, the beard, the ramrod bearing and firm handshake. After some pleasantries

I got to know that Sergey was a Russian self-made entrepreneur, in his late 70s, a computer science expert living in St Petersburg and traveling constantly to Austria. Sergey and Joseph were old friends. A few minutes later, four people entered the room chatting together. Joseph made introductions. Antonio Lombardi, a former Italian politician, dressed to the hilt in a navy double-breasted suit, a maroon tie and maroon pocket handkerchief, followed by Boris Markovic, a Serbian software genius who lived in the US and founded and sold four start-ups. Boris was most probably in his early 40s, dressed in jeans, sneakers and a black turtleneck pullover with a totally bald head and disarming smile.

Next after Boris was Caitlin O'Callaghan, a tall Irish redhead with strong cheekbones and a sculpted nose. "Caitlin", Joseph said as he was introducing her, "was a complete nerd rather than runway model", which I thought in my mind she could easily be. I later understood that Caitlin was instrumental in her work with Mark in programming.

Finally, out of the four, the last was Sir George Archibald, obviously British and no introductions except that he was in the defence business. Archibald had a stern no-nonsense attitude and rapidly slipped away to talk to the technicians and Sergey.

Ten minutes later as Joseph was explaining that all the people I met had been working together for over a year and that the program was both complex and confidential, a gentleman walked in and walked straight to where Archibald was standing. He looked Mediterranean and Joseph took me to meet him. I was wrong – he was from Qatar, Jassim bin Abdul-Rahman Al Thani. He was introduced as a businessman. He was young and it was understood later that Jassim or rather Jerry as he was called by the others was bankrolling this entire operation. As we all were standing around, the technicians were wrapping up and two people walked in and Joseph stepped up to greet them and introduce me.

Jeffery Nash, an American with a clear southern accent in a navy blazer, dark grey trousers, and no tie. Only a name introduction followed by Oksana Babich, blond, short, sharp and explained she is a Ukrainian politician, but before she was in politics she worked in Canada with a global tech consulting firm.

It was clear all knew each other and that I was the only outsider. Strange, I thought, but it reminded me of when I invited Joseph years ago to a private meeting to mediate a major controversial matter involving two governments and two companies. I knew everyone and he came in cold. However, there was never a better mediator, negotiator, honest broker, or conciliator than Joseph.

The door opened again, and Isabella came in with a high voice but pleasant, asking all to take their seats. The technicians were walking out through a large double door in the back of the room. The doors had an interesting wood engraving that looked like a crest, but I could not determine the origin. We all took our marked seats. On my left was Joseph and on my right was Caitlin. We were chatting and then suddenly Mark Fedorov walked in from behind the two double doors with two young men. Mark in his 80's looked young, lean and very sharp with a high forehead and a head of white hair brushed backwards.

Joseph got up and motioned to all of us to remain seated. He shook Mark's hand and they whispered quietly for a couple of minutes, then Joseph turned and said to the group: "You all know Mark except Shafik". I raised my hand and Mark waved back. "Mark", Joseph said, "as you all know and have been working with him for almost a year, is working on a pioneering program. For Shafik's sake, let me explain". Joseph addressed me: "Shafik, you know me as a successful negotiator for over two decades, however I have experienced recently huge hurdles in the world of negotiation and mediation."

Joseph took a deep breath and continued, "In brief, given the complexity, social media, fake news, pace of change, misinformation and deep embedded ideologies sometimes based on illogical and irrational platforms, we have created this group and decided to try a different approach to mediation and negotiation."

Joseph stepped forward and said, "This group for close to a year has put the resources and time to build a digital negotiating platform to negotiate the non-negotiable and since April 2022, we have focused on the Ukraine – Russia war, the facts, the implications and the possible solutions."

Joseph turned around and said, "Mark, the floor is yours...", and Joseph walked to his seat and sat down and crossed his leg and whispered to me, "I hope to open your eyes to a new world."

Mark stepped forward and pointed to the two young men saying, "This is Hugo from Sweden and Patrick from South Africa". He gestured that they take their seats and they both sat at the two tables facing each other. Mark wore a gadget I had got to try a few weeks earlier, a Runner Bone Conduction Wireless headphone. Hugo and Patrick also wore the same and you could hear Mark's words from the speakers of the desktop computers on the two tables.

Mark looked me straight in the eyes and said, "The output that you will hear is the result", and he waved with both arms to encompass the group, "of the work of all in the room."

He added, “We have inspected all the data historically, empirically, and factually of the Russian-Ukraine conflict.” Moreover, he said, this output includes the analysis and opinions of over 3377 individuals from across the globe. These individuals are present politicians, past Presidents and prime ministers, current leaders of think tanks, business, psychology experts, defense, and military leaders both past and present, foreign policy leaders from across the world and representatives of global institutions, in addition to young activists.

“I can say,” Mark added, “that the inputting was complicated and wide-ranging, however it was necessary. All major countries and parties were represented in the data input.” He continued, explaining how complicated that was, reflecting some who urged the destruction of Putin and Russia to others calling for carpet-bombing Ukraine. In addition to others who experienced different views of negotiations, sanctions, escalation, de-escalation, ceasefire, etc.

Mark, walking across the room confidentially said, “With all this data inputted correctly, checked and double-checked, we let the two computers negotiate. We, in recognition of Hugo’s and Patrick’s work, gave both computers the names Hugo and Patrick.”

“Today and for the first time, we will allow both Patrick and Hugo to express what they think is a workable solution to this war.” I blurted: “Think.” Mark smiled...: “Shafik, you may call it what you may, but both computers representing a huge array of views have been in conversation for over 7 weeks after, all inputting was completed. Now, on the occasion of a year of war in Ukraine, here is what they have to say.”

Mark pointed to Hugo and Patrick and both computers in one deep electronic voice said, “Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, here is the result of our mediation and negotiation with all parties. Most of the time was spent with the American and Russian representatives...the next tier of focus was Ukraine and China...the rest was the third tier.”

The voice was astonishing to me... The two young men sitting at the table were looking at the screens watching the text as the speakers blurted the words in a digital fashion.

The Patrick / Hugo computers continued, “Based on the premise that no party from tier one or two have achieved their goals and persistence will not achieve their goals, the following steps can achieve the best resolution:

1. A ceasefire in place
2. An exchange of prisoners.
3. Humanitarian aid to enter the areas of conflict.
4. Russia to de-mine the Ukrainian part of the Black Sea and allow complete export of Ukrainian grain.
5. US and EU to remove 6 selected sanctions by Russia.
6. EU to freeze Ukrainian entry into the EU for 10 years.
7. Russia agrees to withdraw to 24th February 2022 lines provided Ukraine commits by global treaty to not join NATO and be totally neutral with no Western armament, training or intelligence and no Russian political interference.
8. Russia and the US, Ukraine, EU etc. accept the results of a transparent, globally observed, legally binding referendum in the Donbas and Crimea. This is to take place within 120 days from the ceasefire.

9. The US and NATO freeze completely the expansion of NATO and Russia commits to its legal boundaries and the results of the referendum.”

The computers went silent. I thought it was over. I heard a cough and a sigh. I did not know if it was from the computers or a person in the group, but I know I was surprised.

The computer's voice came back and distinctly said, “If such a resolution is not accepted by all parties, we conclude there shall be more deaths, escalation, injuries, human devastation, political grandstanding, immense infrastructure damage and greater global repercussions.”

The voice stopped again. I looked around thinking it was over, then the voice resumed “Do remember now we are in March 2023 and on 19-21 May 2023 the G7 will meet in Hiroshima, where on 9 August 1945 an atomic bomb was dropped killing 146,000 human beings not to mention the after-effects of aftermath radiation and disease.”

Silence followed. It was a sombre message. Mark and Joseph got up and we all followed...all were speaking at the same time discussing what we heard and expressing opinions. My mind was wandering.

I thanked Joseph for this unique experience as all were moving to a private meeting to which I was not invited. Isabella was taking me to the hotel to later meet Joseph for dinner.

As I was in the car heading to the hotel, I was thinking - will there be a dawn after this darkness, or is humanity stuck to repeat its mistakes regardless of consequences?

QUESTIONS OF THE MONTH: A PULSE OF THE GABR FELLOWSHIP COMMUNITY

As the Gabr Fellows enter into leadership roles—in business, diplomacy, government, finance, and more—they will continue to grapple with significant challenges, magnified by an increased pace in technological advancement, the potential for ramped up global inequalities, and changes in governance and economic structures. To better understand the pulse of the Gabr Fellowship community and to begin to articulate substantive dialogue, the Foundation polls the Fellows each month on the key issues facing their respective countries and the global community at large.

1.) The new docudrama about ancient Egypt's Queen Cleopatra drew some criticism from Egyptians stating that the feature was appropriating their culture and rewriting their history, primarily because Cleopatra is portrayed by a Black woman in the film. Do you agree with this criticism?

Yes - 46%

No - 35%

I don't know - 19%

2.) Do you think the US Federal Reserve will resume raising interest rates in the coming months?

Yes - 54%

No - 24%

I don't know - 22%

3.) Do you think that what the Israeli Defense Forces are doing in the West Bank are war crimes, since they have killed over 160 Palestinians, including 27 children?

Yes - 74%

No - 6%

I don't know - 20%

Stay tuned for next month's 'questions of the month' where the Gabr Fellows' take on current events, as our community of future leaders consider the most pressing challenges of today and tomorrow.

European Parliament committee calls for war crimes charges against Israel

By Lahav Harkov

Jerusalem Post, June 2023

The European Parliament's Foreign Affairs Committee called for the EU to help the International Criminal Court to prosecute Israel for war crimes, in a resolution on EU-Palestinian relations on Tuesday.

The resolution said that the committee "regret[s] the limited progress on the ICC infestations in war crimes and crimes against humanity committed in the occupied Palestinian territories and commit to help the ICC and its prosecutor move forward with the investigation and the prosecution."

MEP Evin Incir of the Swedish Social Democrats, the rapporteur for recommendations on the EU's relations with the Palestinian Authority, spearheaded the measure, which passed with 41 in favor, 24 opposed and nine abstentions. It is scheduled to go to a plenary vote in July.

The members of the European Parliament also expressed concern against what it claimed were Israeli "punitive measures," such as withholding funds from the Palestinian Authority and limiting construction in Area C, in response to the PA petitioning international legal forums. The funds were, in fact, frozen in response to the PA's policy of paying terrorists, and the limitations on Area C construction were in response to Palestinians' construction without the required permits, some of which were funded by the EU.

The committee also called to "consider targeted EU measures specifically addressing settlement expansion in the West Bank."

The legislators repeatedly wrote that the EU should ensure the enforcement of Brussels' policies of excluding Israeli products from Judea and Samaria from the EU-Israel Free Trade Agreement and of labeling settlement products as not from Israel.

More broadly, they said that "the principle of legal differentiation between the territory of the State of Israel and the territories occupied since 1967 is applied consistently to the full scope of EU bilateral relations with Israel."

They called for the release of "all political prisoners," which would include members of EU-designated terrorist organizations, such as Hamas, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and Palestinian Islamic Jihad.

The MEPs also "regret the unilateral decisions of some states to recognize Jerusalem as Israel's undivided capital and move their embassies." Three countries have moved embassies to Jerusalem so far - the US, Guatemala and Kosovo - and Hungary plans to be the first EU member state to do so, though it has yet to set a date.

At the same time, they sought to have the EU treat Jerusalem as Palestinian and "work towards the reopening of Palestinian institutions in annexed East Jerusalem; host regular meetings with Palestinian officials in East Jerusalem and support their engagement in the political, economics social and cultural development of East Jerusalem."

The resolution also called for closer ties between Brussels and Ramallah in the form of an Association Council, a high-level dialogue meant to strengthen relations between the EU and non-member countries.

Incir called the recommendations a "historic decision."

"Palestinians have lived under occupation for more than 50 years," Incir tweeted. "[The] EU must strengthen its cooperation with the [PA], help the people and act to end the occupation. [The] PA also has a responsibility to promote [democracy] and reforms."

ABOUT THE FELLOWSHIP

Launched in 2012, the Gabr Fellowship programme helps to connect and build constructive relationships between future leaders between the ages of 24 and 35. Each year, the Fellowship consists of 20-24 Fellows, half of which are men and the other half women, with an equal distribution between participants from the United States and Egypt. The Fellowship also accepts applicants from Jordan, Lebanon, France and the United Kingdom. Fellows represent a variety of sectors, including the arts, law, finance, tech, non- profits, and entrepreneurship – both business and social.

The mission of the Fellowship is to promote greater mutual understanding by building bridges between the two cultures by instigating dialogue and the exchange of ideas between emerging leaders from the United States and Egypt. Together, they explore one another's cultures, political realities, business trends and their goals for the future.

In addition to engaging in deep discussions with key stakeholders from both countries in business, government, academia, religion, science, tech and finance, all Fellows are invited to form multinational teams to complete an action project. These projects empower the Fellows as inter-cultural ambassadors, amplifying the Fellowship's reach and impact.

Ultimately, through hands-on activities, rigorous discussions, cultural site visits, and the collaborative action projects, the Fellows have a greater understanding of both countries and become part of an international cohort dedicated to building a more equitable and peaceful world.

The Gabr Fellows have acquired a greater understanding of both Egypt and the United States and the challenges faced by both communities. Having served as cultural as well as linguistic ambassadors to one another, they then return home to play the role of diplomat, introducing Egyptians and Americans to a people, a culture and a future never before explored in this way.

Together, they are creating the legacy of 'The Gabr Fellowship': an international cohort dedicated to pursuing cooperative, collective solutions to their regions' most pressing issues.

SUPPORT THE FOUNDATION

The Shafik Gabr Foundation invites you to invest in the future and partner with the Foundation using one or more of the following means:

Sponsor a Fellow - Individuals have the opportunity to nominate a Fellow and if selected, sponsor their participation in the Gabr Fellowship. Sponsors will be recognised in all Foundation publications, marketing materials, and at all events.

Corporate patron - Corporations can nominate Fellows for participation in the Fellowship Foundation and sponsor their participation on a company-wide level. The company will be listed in all publications, the logo will be presented on the Foundation's homepage and be given visibility at all events in the United States and Egypt.

Unrestricted support - A general operating grant can empower the Foundation to continue to invest in innovative platforms to facilitate ongoing dialogue between the East and West. From new technologies to expanding the programme to more countries and a greater number of participants, the Fellowship can create a broader multiregional impact.

Gabr Foundation Reading Corner

The Foundation Reading Corner encourages Fellows to critique the books that have been recommended to them in each issue. For this issue, Mr. Gabr recommends A Little History of the United States by James West Davidson and The Earl and the Pharaoh: From the Real Downton Abbey to the Discovery of Tutankhamun by The Countess of Carnarvon.

How did a land and people of such immense diversity come together under a banner of freedom and equality to form one of the most remarkable nations in the world? In 300 fast-moving pages, James West Davidson guides his readers through 500 years, from the first contact between the two halves of the world to the rise of America as a superpower in an era of atomic perils and diminishing resources.

In The Earl and the Pharaoh, the Countess of Carnarvon tells the thrilling behind-the-scenes story of the discovery of the tomb of Tutankhamun on its centennial, and explores the unparalleled life of family ancestor George Herbert—the famed Egyptologist, world-traveler, and 5th Earl of Carnarvon behind it—whose country house, Highclere Castle, is the setting of the series Downton Abbey.
